- One group pre-test, post-test assessments, and 9-month follow-up.
- The Relationship Assessment instrument has 18 questions and was developed by NPCL for its Healthy Marriage and Family Formation project in Florida.
- Instrument was design to assess and explore knowledge gain and attitude change across the following dimensions:
 - Affective affirmation - the caring behaviors by their spouses/partners.
 - Disclosure style - communications within relationships, openness and honesty.

- Sharing - the sharing of household responsibilities and the caring of children.
- Conflict resolution - decision making, destructive or constructive approaches to managing anger and reducing conflict.

•Focus groups were conducted with program participants to gain a clear perspective of their perceptions of the appropriateness of the service delivery model and the qualitative context of the conduct of the classes.

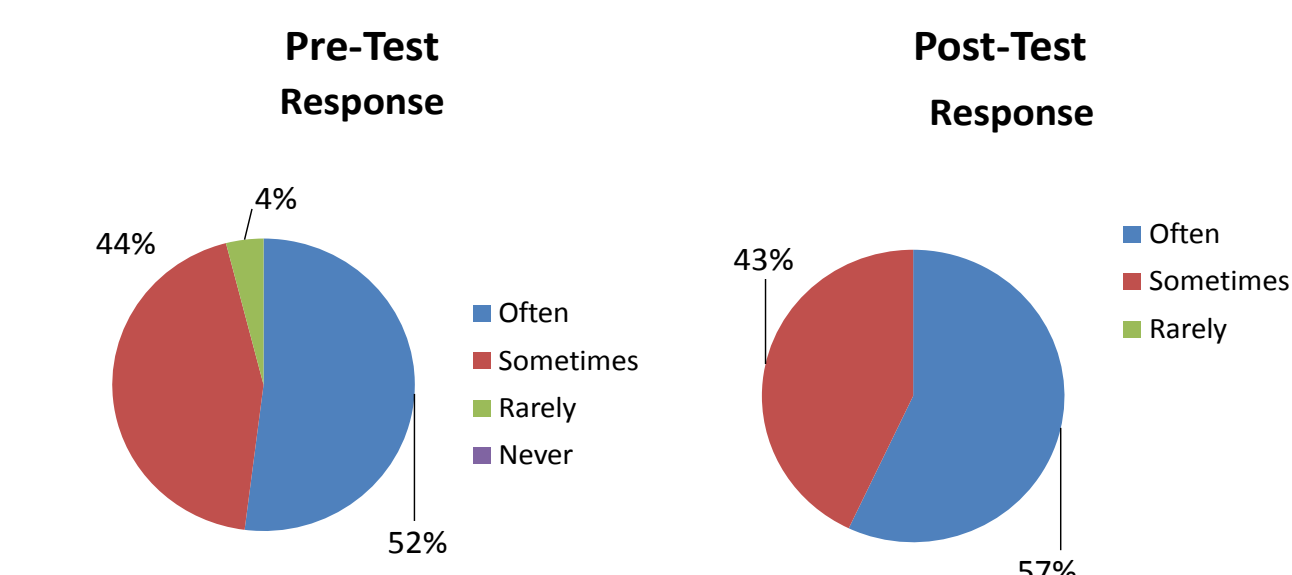

- To date, 377 couples, 259 married and 118 unmarried, 116 married individuals and 92 unmarried singles have completed at least 8 hours of couples relationship education training through SMMP.
- Analysis of the data collected from the assessment instrument and the focus groups suggest significant gains are being made by participants across the four program dimensions

Affective Affirmation

During the past month, how often did you feel that your spouse/partner felt especially caring towards you?

During the past month, how often did you feel that your spouse/partner made you feel good about the kind of person you are?

Sharing of Household Responsibilities
